

Bandit Productions Extends Partnership with Barrett-Jackson and Castrol for Season 3 of Path to Performance

Phoenix, AZ - November 1, 2024: Following a highly successful collaboration on Season 2 of the acclaimed automotive docuseries Path to Performance, Bandit Productions is proud to announce an expanded partnership with Barrett-Jackson and Castrol EDGE for Season 3. After helping bring a bold new vision to life in Season 2, Bandit Productions will continue as the official production partner, delivering even more behind-the-scenes access and high-octane storytelling for car enthusiasts everywhere.

Path to Performance is a deep dive into the passion, precision, and artistry behind building and restoring elite performance vehicles. Season 2 showcased the road to the 2025 Barrett-Jackson Cup at the Scottsdale Auction, following standout builders like Andy Leach of CAL Automotive Creations, and the response from viewers and partners alike made it clear: this series is just getting started.

"Our work with Barrett-Jackson and Castrol on Season 2 was everything we hoped it would be," said Bob Sullivan, Owner and CEO of Bandit Productions. "The series resonated with audiences and raised the bar for automotive content. We're thrilled to carry that momentum into Season 3, telling even bigger and bolder stories from the world of collector cars."

With Barrett-Jackson's unmatched industry access and Castrol EDGE's legacy of performance innovation, Path to Performance offers a unique, authentic look into the car culture community. Bandit Productions brings cinematic storytelling and production expertise to the table, helping translate that passion into compelling visual content.

Season 3 will continue to premiere on Castrol's YouTube channel, offering fans exclusive footage from upcoming auctions, in-depth profiles on top builders, and immersive features on the people, parts, and performance that fuel this world.
